Family or Corporate Farming?

“Learning from each other. Benchmark to the best”
This symposium is designed to help build stronger links between the research and educational platforms provided by UNE with industry and communities in rural Australia.
Family or Corporate Farming?

“One day I’ll be returning to run the family farm. I’m worried are they sustainable? How can we remain profitable? Do we have to get bigger to survive?”

• Are our Family farm models profitable, competitive, sustainable?
• Are our Corporate farmers really the big bad guys some people make out?
• How are leading family farmers measuring their business and what are they doing to remain competitive and ease the pressure?

Let’s learn from each other; Don’t farm alone; Benchmark to the best

• Best practice examples
• Lessons from Family for Corporate farms
• Lessons from Corporate for Family farms

Suitable for students, researchers, academics, producers, wholesalers, industry suppliers, and investors.

Hear from and speak with some leading representatives in the Agricultural space. What are the issues they are confronted with and how are they dealing with them?

What are the latest management techniques these leading family and corporate farmers are using?

Come and learn from others’ experience. Rural Focus will help you build your network with current leaders, other industry organisations and our future leaders.
Guest Speaker:
David Brownhill, Merrilong Pastoral

“My Stories in Agriculture. Issues & Opportunities for the future”

David Brownhill completed a Bachelor of Applied Science - Agriculture degree at Hawkesbury Ag College and graduated with awards in leadership and sportsmanship. He jointly manages Merrilong Pastoral Company whose properties focus on dryland and irrigated grain and cotton production. David is also a founding director of a grower group of 24 farms, AMPS Commercial Pty Ltd, which is committed to information dissemination, structured farming and returning profits to research.

David and Gordon Brownhill are well-known for their pioneering work in zero tillage and controlled traffic farming and long-term involvement in agricultural research.

The Brownhills began farming in 1959 and within a few years had become involved in research with the University of New England and later with Sydney University. David attended University before returning home in 1992. He undertook a Nuffield Scholarship in 1997 and has since gone on to hold roles with the state, national executive, board chair and governance/finance Committee of Nuffield.

David saw the Weedseeker machine in California in 1998 and the Brownhills imported the first machine in 2001. After just one year of sales in Australia, it was estimated that the Weedseeker had generated an impressive $20-25 million in chemical savings.

David is a past director of the RAS foundational board, is a regular presenter at the GRDC Grains Research Updates, been a member of GRDC Update committees and presented at ABARES and the Oxford Farming Conference on Australian Agriculture.

Current director of Merrilong Pastoral Company, AMPS Agribusiness Pty Ltd, Farming for Kids and is member of the Rabobank Client Council for Northern NSW.

The family’s farming operation has grown significantly over the past 25 years, expanding from 1000 hectares in the 1990s to its current size of over 10,000 ha of dryland and irrigation farming.

David is married to Liz, they have three kids, two dogs, and Dave’s mid-life crisis is his WB ute.

Armidale Regional Council
Agriculture and education are two of the major drivers of economic prosperity in this Region which are, indeed, contributing to our nation. Technical solutions, practical knowhow and a trained, skilled workforce in this sector remain at the heart of our competitiveness and sustainability. A key to achieving these outcomes is the ongoing provision of well trained, talented and passionate young people. In this regard the University of New England has a proud and long history in producing some of the world’s most outstanding graduates and researchers, many of whom have gone on to change the world through more sustainable resource stewardship practices and leading-edge production.

It is for these reasons the Armidale Regional Council is proud to sponsor UNE Ag-Week 2019 including both the Rural Focus and Farming Futures career events in 2019.

Home to the nation’s first inland University, UNE, with more than 20,000 enrolments, TAFE New England and a number of highly regarded and leading private, independent and public schools, Armidale is one of Australia’s leading regional education centres.

Armidale is set for a positive and exciting future with diverse industry sectors, confident growth forecasts, a vibrant economy and a regional Council driving crucial infrastructure and sustainable economic success, our City is a great place for you, your business and family.
